TROOPS OF WU PEI-FU FIGHTING ANFU ARMY

Skirmishes Occur In Liukaimiao As Cars Are Commandeered

LI IS NOT GOING

Kiangsu Tuchun Will Only Send Deputy To Advise Hsu

SOLONS PACIFIED

Speakers Informed Wang Will Continue His Peace Mission

The first clash between Chihli troops under the command of General Wu Pei-fu and the Anfu Army under Wu Kwang-hsin, the brother-in-law of Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, was recorded in Liukaimiao, Honan, Thursday when the Anfuites refused to give up certain railway coaches needed by the Chihli army in their withdrawal.

The Anfu army wanted to have first choice in the selection of railway coaches and argued that there was no parallel in the question of urgency between mobilisation and withdrawal. Wu Kwan-hsin considers his forces in mobilisation although no official sanction has yet been given for him to march against Tan Yen-kai.

The Chihli men opened fire and silenced the objectors, who later surrendered the required cars. Wu Pei-fu then seized 500,000 rounds of ammunition which were being sent down to Chang Ching-yao, Anfu Tuchun of Hunan, by the Ministry of War.

General Tsao Kun, Wu Pei-fu's chief, has despatched three battalions of infantry of the fifth mixed brigade to the banks of the Huangho to check any possible movements of the Anfu army towards the South.

HONORS FOR WU PEI-FU

General Tsao has also prepared an elaborate reception in honor of Wu Pei-fu, who is now in Chengchow, Honan, establishing his headquarters. Tsao has ordered the Financial Commissioner of Chihli to raise $100,000 to reward Wu and his forces. He has telegraphed to Peking, in response to President Hsu Shih-chang's invitation, that he would come up to Peking after conferring with his fighting lieutenant. He has placed two battalions of troops to watch the Tehchow Arsenal.

Of the three non-Anfu Tuchuns asked to see Hsu, only General Li Shun of Nanking, has expressed his incapability to go up. He will however send a representative with full power to act on his behalf. The other Tuchun Chang Tso-lin, is expected to arrive in Peking today with a big armed force as body guards.

As the result of an interview between the President and the two speakers of the new Parliament, Li Shen-tao and Liu En-ko, the feeling of the Anfuite lawmakers against the Chief Executive has subsided. Hsu told them that their leader in Shanghai, Wang Yi-tang, will continue to serve as the Northern peace delegate and that the Shanghai Conference will be opened whenever Wang sees fit. He also told them that the Central Government is not concerned with the internal dispute in the Southern camp and will ignore the appointment of Wen Tsung-yao to replace Mr. Tang Shao-yi.

IMPEACHMENT SIDETRACKED

The solons are satisfied and their contemplated impeachment is not likely to be brought up in the new Parliament.

General Tan Yen-kai, the Southern militarist who has been successfully operating against Chang Ching-yao, has offered his peace term—the dismissal of Chang Ching-yao. He says he will cease his hostile acts the moment a Presidential Mandate is issued relieving Chang from office. General Li Shun has endorsed the demand.

Bombarding of smaller cities occupied by Northern troops is being continued. The latest Southern acquisition includes Heianghsiang, Anhua and Heinhua.

Rule Of Famous "Reds" Said To Be At An End

Nicolai Lenine

Leon Trotsky, reported to have been assassinated, and Nicholai Lenin, said to be in flight from Moscow, have had remarkable careers in turbulent Russia.

As leaders of the "Red" movement, and later of the Soviet party, they have ruled the disordered country with a high hand.

The report of their overthrow has not been confirmed.

LODGE PRESIDES AT OPENING OF G.O.P. SESSIONS

Defends Opposition To Peace Treaty And Excoriates President Wilson

(Reuter's Service)

Chicago, June 8.—The Republican National Convention was opened at the Coliseum today by Senator Lodge, temporary Chairman. In his opening address, Senator Lodge defended the Senate's opposition to the Peace Treaty as a patriotic duty.

He declared that President Wilson and "the autocracy he represented" must be excluded from any future control because they stood for an un-American theory of government. People must now make the vital choice, Senator Lodge said, between President Wilson's plan and the independence and safety of the United States.

WILL HIT PROFITEERS

Senator Lodge promised that Republicans would cope with the profiteering evil. He urged that firm steps should be taken to end "the disgraceful record" of the United States during the past seven years with regard to Mexico. It was a primary duty of the United States to deal with Mexico under the Monroe Doctrine, he said, but nothing had been done, and yet the United States was asked to take the mandate for Armenia.

The speaker charged the Democrats with responsibility for "the present perilous conditions" and declared that if Republicans failed to grapple with them effectively, "a Russian descent into barbarism would begin to draw near."

PRE-WAR CLOTHES FOR ARMY, SAYS BRITISH CHIEF

Reclothing Of All Troops To Be Spread Over Five-Year Period

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 8.—Replying to questions in the House of Commons today with regard to the decision to re-equip the Army in uniforms, similar to those worn before the war, which had given rise to criticism, Mr. Winston Churchill stated that full dress would be immediately re-issued to the Guards and the Household Cavalry owing to their ceremonial duties.

This would involve an avoidable expenditure of £150,000 but the abolition of their full dress would mean a loss of fully £80,000.

The reclothing of the rest of the Army would be spread over four or five years.

NO KHAKI WASTED

No existing stocks of khaki would be wasted. Khaki would remain permanently the working and service dress of the whole Army.

Mr. Churchill contended that the historic uniforms of the British Army carried with them a sense of continuity and regimental tradition, which was food for recruiting and discipline. Reclothing was well worth while, if it was done thriftily.

Replying to further questions, Mr. Churchill said that it was never intended to abolish the Irish Guards but that a condition of the recruiting of the Welsh Guards raised the question of the continuance of that regiment. The Army Council had reserved its judgment in this connection.

Canadians Plan Big Development Of Pacific Fleet

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 8.—The Times forecasts that the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, Ltd., will shortly institute cargo services from Atlantic ports via the Mediterranean to India, Ceylon and the Straits Settlements, between Atlantic ports and South Africa and between Pacific ports and the Far East and Calcutta.

The Company will also consider the augmenting of the passenger ship services across the Pacific to the Far East.

RICE PRICE FIRM AT $12; JUNKS TO BE UNDER GUARD

The price of rice danced round the $12 figure yesterday and refused to subside in spite of the inauguration of two public and several private cheap sale depots in Shanghai.

To ease the critical situation in Shanghai, the Civil Governor will encourage rice dealers in Wusih, Quinsan and Changchow, who have refused to ship to this port, to send their cereal to Shanghai.

These cities refrained from shipping under the pretext that they would be robbed and otherwise oppressed if they did. The Civil Governor will furnish river police constables for every rice ship in order to ensure the safety of the cargo.

50 PICULS SIZED

Fifty piculs of rice were confiscated by the Customs authorities yesterday when a shipment from Kiukiang was found to be more than the delivery order called for. The customs dues paid covered only 350 piculs and 88 catties, while the actual quantity was 400 piculs and 60 catties. The surplus weight was ordered to be confiscated and to be sold at the public exchanges.

A movement has been started by the local organisation to put a ban on the exportation of wheat flours. A shortage has already been felt and the price soared up two more points yesterday when it was reported that the Border Defense Army authorities were in the market to purchase a large quantity of flour.

PAK LING MAY BE AFLOAT BY NEXT SUNDAY

Weather Fair And Cargo Is Being Rapidly Taken Aboard Lighters

The Blue Funnel steamer Ling, which is aground on Button Island, may be floated next Sunday, according to radio advices received yesterday by Butterfield and Swire, the local agents. Weather in the vicinity of the scene of the accident is fair and there is no doubt that the vessel can be salved. The task is difficult but is being handled in such a manner that its successful conclusion seems assured.

The radio to the agents said:

"Orestas and lighters arrived at 8 a.m. Discharging cargo from holds numbers 1, 2 and 4. Will not attempt to tow off before Sunday. Light wind. Sea smooth. Ship lying quiet. Victoria returning for pump, etc."

GET GOOD NEWS

The Shanghai Tug and Lighter Company, which sent the first tugs and lighters to the aid of the distressed ship at the order of the agents, received the following radio yesterday from the St Dominic:

"Four lighters here enough. No more required. Victoria returning now. Prospects re-floating very good."

The Orestas, mentioned in the radio to Butterfield and Swire, is a Blue Funnel steamer which was sent to the scene when rough weather off Shanghai prevented a smaller vessel from towing the lighters to the scene of the wreck, some sixty miles south of this port.

BRITON EXPLAINS WHY WAR-WEATH LEVY IS VOIDED

Chancellor Of Exchequer Pays High Tribute To Nation's Rich In Commons

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 8.—In the House of Commons today, Mr. Austen Chamberlain explained the Government's decision not to impose the levy on war wealth. He pointed out that, as payment could be made in Government securities, the levy could not materially reduce the floating debt. Mr. Chamberlain emphasised the fears of business men with regard to the effect of the levy and stated that the excess profits duty would produce twice as much as the levy in the same period. He now proposed to maintain the excess profits duty at 60 percent this year and to continue the duty or its equivalent for a longer period than would otherwise have been necessary.

PRAISES THE RICH

Mr. Chamberlain paid warm tribute to the manner in which [illegible] recipients of large incomes [illegible] some cases only about five shillings in the pound had been [illegible] taxes had been paid.

Mr. Chamberlain said that no other country had attempted a financial effort comparable with that of Great Britain or in which the well-to-do had been so heavily taxed.

RISE IN EXCHANGE

Illustrating the financial recovery of Great Britain, Mr. Chamberlain referred to the rise in the dollar exchange and stated: "We are in a position to buy our half of the Anglo-French loan in America, and meet all the other market obligations of the Treasury in the United States to the end of 1920, with a satisfactory margin.

"The debt of one hundred million dollars to the Argentine will be redeemed in a few days, the loan of twenty million yen in Japan will be paid off in a month, while a provision is being made at home for a reduction of debt by two hundred and thirty million sterling this year and three hundred millions next year, without additional taxation."

Civilians Quit Changsha When Siangtan Falls

Mutiny Is Feared Among Tuchun's Troops As Southerners Come

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Special Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, June 11.—The report that General Tan Yen-kai's troops have reached Siangtan, Hunan, has been confirmed. The provincial capital, Changsha, is imperiled as Siangtan is only less than 30 miles from the city.

Northern forces are evacuating Siangtan. These are themselves opposed to General Chang Ching-yao, the Northern Tuchun. It is feared that a clash between these and the loyal forces of Chang will take place before Tan's army approaches Changsha. Civilians in the capital are fleeing for safety.

SAYS ENGLAND MAY REQUIRE PACT CHANGES

'Morning Post,' However, Thinks Alliance Should Be Renewed

MUST HAVE OPEN DOOR

Shoda Urges Strengthening Of Bonds Between Japan And England

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 8.—The Morning Post today, in a leading article on the question of the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, says that undeniably the policy of the Forward party in Japan has latterly looked as if it were inspired by a desire to get concessions from China which amount to securing a position of economic preponderance, to which Great Britain and the United States cannot possibly be expected to assent.

The journal does not doubt that a connection "by which both countries have done very well," should be continued.

"Great Britain," it says, "is not fond of quitting tried friends, and the Japanese are understood to be not insensible to having been the first foreign nation to call Great Britain an ally. But we must have an open door in China."

SHODA URGES PACT

Mr. Kanye Shoda, member of the Japanese House of Peers and ex-Minister of Finance, interviewed by the Evening Standard, urged the renewal and strengthening of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

He declared that Japan was a firm believer in British genius for empire. Great Britain, he said, required an open door for commerce in the East, which Japan [illegible]

[illegible] described as "artificial Germanspread reports. With regard to Japanese finance, Japan, he asserted had no reason for pessimism. He urged that Great Britain and Japan could help each other in the solution of industrial problems.

BOLSHEVIKI IN JAPAN

Bolshevism, he said, was slowly percolating into Japan; but Japanese workers, as well as British, would see that Bolshevism was a whited sepulchre. If it came to a world-wide struggle against anarchy, Great Britain would have a useful and willing ally in Japan.

It was to Great Britain's interest, Mr. Shoda maintained, that Japan should develop shipbuilding. Emphasising the great commercial possibilities of the alliance, Mr. Shoda pointed out that Japan was at present hampered by lack of raw materials but he hoped that the alliance would enable Japan to get these from Great Britain.

MAY MODIFY

London, June 9.—It is pointed out that the Anglo-Japanese Alliance expires in July, 1921. There is reason to believe that both sides, in view of the changes, effected by the war and the existence of the League of Nations, are not averse to modifying minor points of a technical character although both recognise that the continuance of the Treaty is important.

It is pointed out that Article 4, dealing with the General Arbitration Treaty, was revised in 1911 in order to exempt the United States from the application of the agreement but, as it was never enforced, it may be necessary to employ another formula.

WAR PROVISO

Note.—Article 4 of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was revised in 1911 to the following: "Should either of the High Contracting Parties conclude a treaty of general arbitration with a third Power, it is agreed that nothing in this Agreement shall impose upon such Contracting Party an obligation to go to war with the Power with whom such arbitration treaty is in force."

TROTSKY KILLED; LENIN IN FLIGHT, SAYS A REPORT

Reported New Head Of Soviet Russia

GEN. A. A BRUSILOFF

General Brusiloff, now commanding the Soviet troops engaged against Poland, is reported to be at the head of the government of Western Russia, following the murder of Leon Trotsky and the flight of Nicholai Lenin.

"FALSE" IS OPINION OF RUSS AGENT INSHANGHAI

Says Peking Would Have Known It If True

NAME BRUSILOFF

Archbishop Chihon Said To Be Connected With New Regime

(Reuter's Service)

Tokio, June 11.—The Vladivostok correspondent of the Asahi states that Medvedieff has received a wireless message from Moscow, announcing that Trotsky has been murdered and that Lenin is a fugitive as a result of a counter-revolution.

A new government has been established under General Brusiloff. It is stated that Archbishop Chihon is also a member of the new Government.

(Representatives of the Provisional Government of Russia in this city last night branded as "false" and "fantastic" the statements in the foregoing despatch. The representatives in question were of the opinion that the alleged despatch was propaganda, evolved for the purpose of causing general uneasiness and affecting the morale of the Soviet and other Russian units in the Far East).

The Shanghai manager of the Dalta News Agency, which is in close touch with its headquarters in Peking and also with Moscow and Vladivostok, declared last night that there was no truth in the Asahi's report of a coup by Gen. Brussiloff.

"These reports amount to nothing," he said. "Things are going too nicely in Siberia to please the Japanese and they have been circulating reports similar to this one for ten days or two weeks. Their object is to excite and confuse the people of Siberia. Wireless messages from Moscow to Vladivostok are relayed about four times en route. They come via Omsk, Irkutsk and other points, so that we should have had this news in Peking at least as quickly as they would have had it in Vladivostok—if it was authentic. It reminds me of the reports that were circulated several months ago when, for certain reasons, the Moscow wireless was silent for a few days. You will also recall the wild reports about Judenditch's taking of Petrograd.

WOULD HAVE KNOWN

"The principal British, American and Japanese papers are represented in Moscow. If anything like this had happened, don't you suppose the correspondents there would have got something out about it?

"Again, Brussiloff joined the Soviet government of his own free will and was given command of the army which is being formed to teach the Poles a little lesson. Do you suppose he would be foolhardy enough to attempt such a coup in the midst of his plans to drive the Poles out of Russia? Impossible!

"M. Medvedieff not only heads the Zemstvos Government in Vladivostok, but is also Minister of Foreign Affairs. Do you suppose he would give this despatch to the Asahi correspondent and ignore the British, American and other correspondents there?

"No. You may rest assured

MOTORIST FINED $200; UP BEFORE FOR MAN'S DEATH

Furious Driving And No License Are Charges Made In Case

Fines amounting to $200 were imposed in the Mixed Court yesterday on a Chinese chauffeur who had previously been before the court on a charge of manslaughter for which he was fined $50. The case was heard by British Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Li.

Inspector Vaughan testified that the man was driving on Szechuen Road at a rate of 30 miles an hour and was on the wrong side of the street. He caused his arrest. The inspector's evidence was corroborated by police constables who were on duty near the scene of the occurance.

One fine of $100 was assessed on a charge of furious driving and a similar amount was marked against the man because he had no license.

The chauffeur admitted that he had been arrested before on a charge of manslaughter, after having accidentally killed a man, and that he paid a fine of $50.

German Cabinet Again Resigns

President Asks Members To Continue Until Substitutes Appear

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, June 8.—The Government have tendered their resignation to the President who has requested them to carry on provisionally.

The President has also requested the Chancellor to ensure that the election results are definitely established as soon as possible, in order to enable the Reichstag to be convened at the earliest date.

Paris, June 9.—According to a telegram from Berlin, President Ebert has requested the Chancellor, Dr. Mueller, to form a new Cabinet.

The Berlin press is unanimously of opinion that it is impossible to form a lasting coalition.

there is no truth in this Asahi report."

"Leon Trotsky," so-called, and Nicholai Lenin were two of the most startling and spectacular figures in the great Russian upheaval, toward which the eyes of the world have been engaged for the past five years.

For years previous to the great cataclysm these two men had paraded up and down Europe, preaching the doctrines of various sorts of communism and mass-violence, until each had been warned out of practically every sub-division of the Old World.

Trotsky, indeed, had made himself so objectionable in Spain, just prior to the outbreak of the Great War, that he had been deported to Cuba, from which country he managed to make his way to New York. He was making "Red" speeches from a soap-box at Madison Square when the news of the Russian Revolution reached the United States.

STOPPED BY BRITISH

Trotsky immediately took passage for Russia, but was halted by British authorities at Falmouth on the ground that he was a notorious "Red" and not eligible to entry into any Old World country.

Meanwhile the Romanoff monarchy had been overthrown during the "Bloody Week" beginning on March 12, 1917, and Kerensky had been named Prime Minister, with practically unlimited authority. Lenin, who had bobbed up in Petrograd, had been given a minor portfolio.

Trotsky appealed to Kerensky from England and the Provisional Prime Minister persuaded the British authorities to permit the "Red" to proceed into Russia.

THEIR GRATITUDE

Less than six months later Lenin and Trotsky proved their gratitude by accomplishing the overthrow of the Kerensky regime and the establishment of themselves and their satellites at the head of affairs in distracted Russia.

Since then Lenin and Trotsky have pursued their perilous way on the wave-crest of internal Russian politics with a high degree of audacious success, considering the turmoil of affairs.

Noted Beauty Whose Divorce Is Revealed

Mrs Leonard Thomas.

Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, of New York, whom the French artist, Paul Helleu, called "America's most beautiful woman," has admitted, it is said, that she and Mr. Thomas had been divorced many months ago. The divorce, it was said, was granted in Paris. Society was surprised to hear of the decree, though, it is said, intimate friends of the couple knew they had been living apart. Mrs. Thomas is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles May Oelrichs, of New York. She married Thomas in 1910, after a romantic courtship. Hundreds of artists have sought permission to paint her portrait. She has written poetry and drama, and is well versed in politics, being strongly pro-suffrage. Mrs. Thomas is about thirty years old. Mr. Thomas is forty-two, and is a Yale graduate. He has held several diplomatic posts, once being second secretary to the United States Embassy in Rome, and later first secretary to the Legation at Madrid. The couple have three children.

Cook Rides Stolen Bicycle; Arrested; Thief Is Imprisoned

Being sportively inclined Wong Tung-tse climbed the wall at the residence of Mr. S. Segaki, in Barchet Road, to see what he could see.

A brilliantly enameled bicycle with shiny nickel fittings caught his eye and aroused a feeling of avarice. And so he hoisted the bike over the wall and set out for a spin.

But his conscience troubled him—also a fear that he might be caught by the police.

Then he had a happy thought.

Stopping at 125 Range Road, where he knew the cook, he casually inquired if the creator of culinary delights wouldn't look after the machine for the night. The cook gladly assented—and, when Wong was gone, went out for a ride.

The police got him.

But the cook told and Wong went to prison.

The Chinese Recorder

(The Chinese Recorder. Vol. LI, June 1920. Published monthly by the American Presbyterian Mission Press).

In this number Mr. T. C. Chao of Soochow University continues his study of "The Problem of Securing College Graduates for the Christian Ministry," and produces a temperate statement that is at once a criticism and a challenge. We would call especial attention to the section where he deals with the budget for the minister's family. To many a missionary it will come with a shock to know that he sets his minimum figure at $61 a month but how anyone can read the analysis of the budget and not be forced to agree with Mr. Chao is beyond comprehension. And the writer has the advantage of being Chinese himself and so better able to judge of the needs of an educated man, and of the financial demands upon him. Otherwise it would be a shame to mention that this statement had to come from a Chinese and not a foreigner.

The second article is likewise from a Chinese pen, and we may say in passing that it is decidedly a healthy sign that so many Chinese articles are to be found in the pages of this veteran magazine in the course of a year. Mr. Francis C. M. Wei is from Boone University, Wuchang, and he writes of the "Doctrine of Salvation by Faith as Taught by the Buddhist Pure Land Sect, and Its Alleged Relation to Christianity." It is a subject that all Christians in China would do well to be informed about; and it is one which the student of Chinese religions cannot get along without knowing. As the article is not concluded in this number, it is not possible to pass final judgment on its value, but it would appear to be at least very useful for the beginner, and for any who have not paid special attention to the matter.

The article "Nationality and Religion" which attempts to answer the question "Is Christianity Patriotic?," has a special timeliness, when the idea is being spread by at least one eastern government that Buddhism is patriotic, and so superior to Christianity, which is international. There is much food for thought in the ideas presented.

Mr. J. Lossing Buck offers the report of a year's experience as an agricultural missionary at Nanhsuchow, Anhwei. The experiment being conducted at that station by the American Presbyterians is most interesting, and while not unique in China, is of a sort that is rarely found. That a mission which is on the ground for a religious purpose should turn to the business of experimenting with fertilisers is a fact that should give the lie to any who think that missions have their noses in the air. A deliberate attempt is made to reach the Chinese farmer by studying the conditions of his material prosperity, and inspired by wisdom from the Book of Proverbs, to put economics and religion together. The record of the attempt surely deserves to be pondered carefully.

The report of the eighth annual meeting of the China Continuation Committee is interesting for what it tells of the past, but more so for what it promises for the future.

Government Is Pyramiding Loans To Keep Going; Day Of Reckoning Near

Wildcat Financing Scored By Writer—Peace Talk Too Resonant—Politics At Peking Assuming "Quaint" Characteristics

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Our Peking Correspondent)

Peking, June 9.—Amid all the excitements of mock warfare, peace conferences and wranglings over a future cabinet, the government is frantically barricading the door against the wolf. It will probably even keep him off for another few months.

By the familiar process of pyramiding credits, sufficient money will be raised from home sources to meet the most pressing immediate demands on the government at the Dragon Boat Festival the end of next week.

According to present plans a loan of $3,500,000 will be made on ten-month treasury bills secured on the future salt surplus and paying fifteen percent interest. Fifteen percent on a government issue!

LOCAL BANKS FIGURE

The loan will be taken up by local banks at par. The payment of the principal will be guaranteed by the Salt Gabelle Inspectors, Sir Reginald Gamble's name appearing on the certificates.

The Salt Gabelle will lay by enough money out of the surplus released monthly to the government to take up the certificates in monthly installments after the fourth month.

Another $2,000,000 will be issued on the Wine and Tobacco Bureau receipts, the bureau having taken the responsibility of placing the loan. From the Salt and Customs surplus, due to be released in a few days, there should be enough to make a total of $10,000,000; which, it is estimated, will see the government through on demands that cannot be postponed. And thus another crisis is staved off.

"WILDCAT" FINANCE

That this is wildcat financing need hardly be pointed out. It is postponing, not averting, the crash. It is a repetition of the familiar process of meeting present debts by hypothecating future receipts.

The salt surplus, which will have to allotted to pay up the $3,500,000 treasury bills, simply uses up the receipts that will be needed to pay the government's running expense for the next ten months. At the end of those ten months the government will still be in debt by just that amount and have to go through the same process.

SAME SITUATION

In fact, it will be in the same situation before then, as the next settlement day comes at the Harvest Festival in October.

Some day there will be a telescoping of all these hypothecations and obligations and then there will be a gorgeous tumbling.

But by that time, of course, all the present governing personages will have laid by a comfortable nest of eggs and will be in retirement somewhere with their concubines and their entourages, snugly secure.

MUCH SQUABBLING

Meanwhile there is much squabbling over peace. They cry "Peace, Peace" too resonantly now. Everybody wants peace.

The Shanghai Military Government wants to make peace.

The Canton Military Government wants to make peace.

For Peking the problem is not whether to make peace, but with whom. Which shall it recognise as the enemy?

Canton claims the honor; so does Shanghai. Peking cannot kiss and make up with one without antagonising the other.

SUGGESTS MEDIATION

President Hsu therefore, with a touch characteristic of Chinese political quaintness, has suggested mediating between the two enemies. After having pacified and united them, then they can negotiating peace with the united enemy. Thus putting the reverse Chinese on the old maxim "Divide et Impera."

Really, this is no task for a correspondent. It is a task for a comic opera librettist. For how it makes one tittle of a difference who makes peace, or whether they make peace at all, this commentator fails to see.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 11.—There is no radical change in the political situation. It is understood that the Government has replied to the Canton administration, saying that it is impossible to replace Wang Yi-tang, who is the Government's official representative, but that the appointment of Wen Tsung-yao is an internal matter, with which the Canton Administration alone should deal. In this the Government is logical as it never admitted the right of Canton to object to Wang Yi-tang.

Police and military leaders met this morning at the instigation of the Anfu Club and resolved to send a telegraphic circular to the provinces, urging the immediate opening of peace negotiations at Shanghai, and also contending that Wen Tsung-yao should not be recognised as Chief Southern delegate.

BREAKS JOURNEY

General Hsu Shu-tseng broke his journey at Kalgan yesterday and the date of his arrival at Peking is now uncertain. General Li Shun has despatched his representative, General Hoen Pu, to Peking while General Tsao Kun's representative, General Li Hung-chi, is already here. General Chang Tso-lin will arrive tomorrow. These impending arrivals explain the present lull.

The feeling in foreign circles continues to be one of surprise that Tang Shao-yi, Dr. Wu Ting-fang and Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who are principally responsible for Canton's failure to negotiate with Wang Yi-tang and who broke off relations with the Canton Administration ostensibly owing to the fact that the voice of the people was not heard in the councils of the Canton Administration, should have entered into an unnatural alliance with the extreme militarists of the North; for it is understood that the Shanghai group are in close touch not only with Wang Yi-tang but also with the forces which are at present arrayed secretly against the President.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Reuter's is evidently taking too seriously the reports circulated by the Chenhsuehui agents in Peking. As Wang Yi-tang explained to THE CHINA PRESS Thursday, these intriguants do not want peace and would attack any one inclined to negotiate. The rumors of an alliance of the "Big Four" constitutionalists in Shanghai and the extreme militarists of the North were no doubt originated by the Chenhsuehui delegates in Peking.

Reuter's is not quite correct in saying that Tang, Wu and Sun are responsible for Canton's failure to negotiate with Wang Yi-tang. The question of personality was never the real cause of delay.

It will be remembered that Mr. Tang, as Southern peace delegate, in an interview of the THE CHINA PRESS, clearly stated that in all peace parleys, one must be prepared to talk with enemies, not with friends.

INCORRECT CLAIM

The statement that "the Shanghai group is in close touch with not only Wang Yi-tang but also with the forces which are at present arrayed secretly against the President" is impossible.

The exchange of calls between Tang and Wang so far has been merely personal. No reference has yet been made on the peace terms.

It is true that Wang paid a visit to Dr. Sun when the former was first appointed peace delegate. Dr. Sun's one peace term, the preservation of the old Parliament, was not acceptable to Wang and they have not seen each other since.

Dr. Wu, of course, has had no chance to see Wang even if he wanted to. How can they be in close touch?

Work Of Churches Much Needed, Says Mr. Lloyd George

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 9.—Speaking at a meeting of the Union of Welsh Independents at Pwllheli today, Mr. Lloyd George, discussing the duty of the Christian churches in connection with reform said that their especial task was to create an atmosphere in which reform was possible and the perpetuation of evil impossible.

He declared that great confusion and conflict of purpose were paralysing goodwill in every land.

The German elections showed a distracted people split into hopeless contending factions, he said, without any clear purpose and with no ascendant voice or note.

"So far," the Premier added, "we have avoided that catastrophe in Great Britain; but it is spreading through out the world and the churches alone can save the people from the disasters which will ensue if anarchy of will and aim continue to spread."

Daniels Deplores Navy Reductions

(Reuter's Service)

New York, June 7.—Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, in a statement deploring the reductions made in the Naval appropriation bill, complains of the failure of Congress to make provision for adequate naval expansion in the Pacific—made imperative by the needed presence of a great American fleet there—and for proper protection of the Pacific coast and the outlying American islands.

Mr. Daniels declares that the vote of £4,000,000 for naval aviation is only half sufficient, and that the failure to authorise the building of a single new ship is equally bad policy.

With a few exceptions nobody here considers £4,000,000 sufficient for the wants of the air service.

Crystal Palace Open Once More

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 9.—After six years utilisation for war purposes the Crystal Palace was reconsecrated for public use this morning when the King and Queen opened the Imperial War Museum which is housed in the Crystal Palace.

In the course of his speech His Majesty urged that no one should forget that Great Britain owed her success in the war, under God, not to armed forces alone, but to the labors and sacrifices of soldiers and civilians, men and women, alike. It was a democratic victory, the work of a nation in arms, organised as never before, for a great national struggle.

A.F. Of L. Opens Convention; Has Heavy Program

(Reuter's Service)

Montreal, June 7.—The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, presided over by Mr. Samuel Gompers, opened here today. The program includes resolutions dealing with the political situation in the United States, the high cost of living, Bolshevism, President Wilson's foreign policy, industrial courts, public ownership of railroads, the impeachment of Mr. Palmer, the U. S. Attorney-General, and the Irish question.

A LABOR POLICY

Mr. Gompers in his opening address emphasised the necessity for an enforcement of Labor policy. He urged that Labor should use its force moderately but that any attempt to legislate forbidding strikes must be resisted at all costs.

The Irish delegates presented a resolution accusing Great Britain of seeking to destroy the Irish Republic by military force and demanding that the Irish people be permitted to guide their own destinies. The resolution was referred to committee.

PARIS WOMEN NOW DANCE TO FORGET

Torrent Of Gayety Engulfs Those Who Would Banish Horrors Of War

Paris, April 28.—The only happy women in France today are those who were mere girls in 1914. The war has left an indelible imprint on the minds of all the others. In whatever fashion they may try to wipe it out, one fact is certain—it will not lead to happiness.

The women of France are in process of adjustment to a new kind of life, one which they never expected. They are forced to accomplish, in a few months a development for which years are necessary. Young women of the middle class, who were in their teens when the war began, had been brought up with the idea of marriage. They dreamed of nothing but the happiness of home. France lost a million and a half of the flower of her manhood in the five years of conflict. Owing to the enormous disproportion between the number of men and women today, our whole social life is changing. Women have had to take the places of their brothers in all branches of industry. Hundreds of thousands of young women are doomed to celibacy.

As for those who were married at the beginning of the war half of them are now "white widows," enjoying a kind of freedom which they have never asked for and which they are even now regarding as a species of slavery. And those whose husbands survived the slaughter are face to face with a new problem. During the long separations both husband and wife were subjected to a process of evolution. The husband acquired habits of command, the wife those of independence. The Frenchwoman does not like that. She likes to obey, it is true, but she does not expect to be ordered.

You will tell me that the life of Paris has never been so gay as it is at present. It is a superficial gayety. Dancing is not always an expression of joy. But dancing is practically the only amusement the French girls are capable of today. There has never before been such a riot of dancing. Under colored lights amid the voluptuous or lugubrous surroundings of the dance halls, hundreds of women, always the same, tango and fox trot in Paris, just as they are doing in London and Berlin. They are dancing in the restaurants of the boulevards and the cafes of the outskirts of Paris. They are tangoing in the wineshops where before the war one never saw anything of the terpsichorean art beyond the gyrations of a dozen journeymen, pirouetting in the mazes of one of their provincial dances.

Never has the Frenchwoman worn so much jewelry, so many furs. Do not believe that this refers only to the women of society and the women of the demi-monde, the idle, the rich those who in all times have led the lives of parasites. Even the women of the people are being engulfed by the torrent. Never have we seen so many gayly bedecked cooks, so many powdered and painted midinettes, so many little working girls dashing from the factory to the hairdresser or the pastry cook.

Our parents have often told us how quickly France recovered after the disaster of 1870-71. What we were able to accomplish in the dark days of defeat seems impossible of achievement on the morrow of victory. The heart of France is still torn. Her soul, after the sublime effort of the war, has not yet resigned itself to the less sublime but none the less necessary work of peace.

Stop any of those little dancers in her gilt slippers and clinging gown, stop her in the midst of the gay whirl in which she seems to be trying to fly from herself. Look in her eyes, listen to her laugh. You will discover in her soul, with all its vain, petty thoughts, a feeling of uneasiness and melancholy, the desire which is almost a disease to forget yesterday and tomorrow to forget even that she is alive.

Goodbye, Marie!

"If I make up my mind to have another trip around the world, and I hope I do, then I shall look forward to seeing and playing in Shanghai again. You have been very kind, you have done all that you could to make us comfortable, and in turning out tonight and giving us so genuine and enthusiastic a reception, on so warm a night you have shown wonderful loyalty. Thank you on behalf of my company and myself."

That is very much what Miss Marie Tempest said last night when a crowded house called her again and again before the curtain after the company had given a brilliant interpretation of Robert Marshall's comedy "The Duke of Killiecrankie."

Miss Tempest leaves tonight for Hongkong and after a season at that colony, and another at Manila, the talented little lady will tour Australia and then make for South America. That her journeys will all be pleasant and that she will soon be with the Shanghai playgoer again is the earnest hope of everyone who has had the pleasure of seeing the Tempest Company in action. Mr. Graham Browne has won admirers wherever he has been but no where could he have had better receptions than at the Lyceum Theater. Again let us hope that the whole company will be with us again before many moons have passed over our heads.

SHORT AND SOUR

BY 'BUGS' BAER

YOU'RE NEXT

The cost of gathering the alfalfa crop on the shilling has been hyped up to six bits a copy. Bay rum, hair tonic and other popular drinks are extra.

The price has been fixed by the Chicago barbers and the flower of American manhood must bow the bean or step around looking like chrysanthemums with ears. The cost of lathering the teeth and soping the ear drums will be jolted up to fifty cents an operation. No charge for tonsorial courtesy. That's thrown in. The voice with the tip wins.

Having most of your sox and part of your half-soled-and-heeled brogans polished will set you back twenty cents, minus the added assessment of rescuing your overalls from the boy with the barbed wire whisk-broom.

By the time the henna topped manicurist removes the foundations from your lunch hooks and loosens up the nails so they will flap like weather vanes, you will just have enough carfare left to walk home. Provided the mileage rate on revolving doors hasn't been raised during your short absence from civilization in the barber chair.

Six bits for a wool chop ain't much compared to what it cost Samson. But it's plenty in comparison to what the richest man in America pays each year for having his dome moved. This is one time where he hasn't got an excuse for hopping up the price of cylinder syrup.

From the time you hang your turban in the hook until the time some other slicker puts it on, a pilgrimage in the barber abbatoir will nick you about eight dollars and sixteen cents in coin of this administration. Democratic coin is losing its purchasing power among representative American industries. The powerful brewers and distillers absolutely refuse to accept it in exchange for their goods. It is still good in tonsorial parlors, but valueless in tonsilial works. The extra sixteen cents is the war tax incurred from grabbing a wound stripe in the third chair from the left.

Giving the women the vote hasn't done a thing to puncture the high cost of shaving. Equal suffrage stops at the doors of Ali-Baba and his forty barbers. Ten years ago, shaves were five-and-ten and the barbers would try to drown you in free bay rum. Pop had his old gilt lettered shaving cup on the shelf with his lodge insignia blown in the bottle. It stood within easy germ jumping distance of a journeyman plumber's lather pot and the landlord's soap kettle. You could read a man's history right on his sud mixer. Pop had been going into that shop for forty years and mixing his rich Saturday night breath with the barber's more luxuriant exhalations. If pop didn't have the price of a shave, his face was as good as his bond, if the barb did clip a few coupons off it once in a while. There was a spirit of cameraderie around the works, and while waiting for his favorite slasher, Pop could perch in a chair and grab himself a pink education out of the Police Gazette.

But, now, all that is behind the roller towel. The barber has joined the profiteers and every man's chin will be raised against him in anger.

Churchill Tells Of Progress On Construction Of Five Big Airships

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 8.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Commander J. P. Kenworthy (Independent Liberal) and Lord Curzon, Mr. Winston Churchill said that the German airship, L.71, had not yet been presented but that it was expected to arrive in England shortly.

He stated that the British airships under construction at the end of the war which it had been decided to complete on account of the money spent on them, were the R-36, R-37, R-38, R-39, and R-40 of which the R-38 would be handed over to the United States when completed under an agreement for its purchase.

PROCEED SLOWLY

The work on the others was proceeding slowly in anticipation of their employment for commercial purposes. It was expected that valuable information would be obtained from the L-71, which was one of the most modern specimens of German research.

Replying to questions regarding the delay in handing over this vessel, Mr. Churchill stated that he was not dis-satisfied with the way the Germans were carrying out this portion of the Treaty.

Biggest Auditorium Will Be Used For Lectures In Quaint City

(China Press Correspondence)

Soochow, June 10, 1920.—The Soochow School Association has just announced that it has been successful in securing Dr. John Dewey for a series of lectures the last week in June. Arrangements have been made for the lectures to be delivered in St. John's Methodist Church, which is adjacent to the Soochow University campus. The auditorium of this church is the largest in the city, seating about 1,500 people, so that by coming in relays, all the students of the city will have an opportunity of hearing Dr. Dewey at least once during the three or four days he is here.

The securing of Dr. Dewey is a good example of the fine work this association is doing in Soochow. The government and mission schools, through their representatives in this association, have worked together in the greatest harmony for the past several years, dealing with all sorts of problems that concern their common welfare. For the first few years the principal of the Government Technical School was president of the association, and for the past two years President Cline of Soochow University has been president.

American Shipping Shows Large Gain

Yokohama Harbor May Figures Show Increase Of 27 Ships Over 1919

Tokio, June 5.—Figures just available from the Harbor Master's office in Yokohama show that during the month of May, 323 vessels, having a tonnage of 627,760 tons, entered the port. Japanese vessels exceeded any other nationality in number and tonnage. There were 75 Japanese vessels engaged in foreign trade and 185 in coastwise trade, having a total tonnage of 378,734 tons. American ships numbered 32 with a tonnage of 129,327 tons, British 16 with 65,906 tons, and other nationalities 14 vessels and 53,795 tons.

Comparing these figures with May, 1919, the tonnage has increased, but there were fewer vessels. During May last year 337 steamers entered with a tonnage of 486,936 tons. This is 24 more vessels than this year but the tonnage is less by 140,824 tons. By nationality there were 104 Japanese vessels in the foreign trade and 212 in coastwise trade with a total tonnage of 397,637 tons, American 5 with 19,734 tons, British 9 vessels and 50,431 tons, others 7 vessels and 19,134 tons.

American shipping has made a striking gain in the twelve months of 27 vessels and in increased tonnage of 109,593 tons. British vessels increased 7 vessels and 15,475 tons and Japanese tonnage dropped 56 vessels and 16,903 tons.

FAT LADY SQUAD LOSES 80 POUNDS IN 5 LEAN DAYS

Dieting And Exercising Without Result Discourages Some Heavies

MORE WORK, LESS TO EAT

Doctor Cheers By Saying Feeling Of Hunger Is Lost After Fasting

Chicago, April 30.—Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson and his class of twenty-four overupholstered women are fixing public attention on the terrors of obesity. The Health Commissioner took charge of these volunteers for reduction to impress upon the great fleshy school that will power applied to exercise and food would bring them back to normal in weight and health.

The women range from twenty-four to fifty years of age and from 147 to 323 pounds. There are four stenographers, thirteen housewives, three nurses, two clerks and two lawyers. They had all heard more or less how Lillian Russell and Amelia Summerville had kicked off surplus fat, but without direction and regular exercises they admitted failure.

Now after five days of trembling and dieting they have lost a total of eighty pounds. No reward offered. The total weight when the class began "trying the fat" was 4,831. Tonight it is 4,751 pounds. Mrs. Nellie Leonard carried off the honors of the class by bringing her weight down from 323 pounds to 315. The least progress was made by Miss Mary Berglund, who dropped only a single pound during the week.

Some of the women are getting discouraged and are sending excuses for absence.

ROBERTSON GIVES RULES

"There will be outdoor work, plenty of it," Dr. Robertson said. "As bending and stopping are necessary, there will be work over the wash tub and other similar household devices. All manner of exercise will be ordered. The exercise will be adapted to the particular case. Many of these women have done and are doing vigorous work now. Others are employed in offices. Where outdoor exercise would benefit the latter class, it would not help the others."

The dieting will be severe, at least to those who like sweets and rich foods. Here again the individual case will be treated. "Some people get thin on candy, others get fat," the doctor said. "Potatoes, rich gravies and fatty meats work the same way."

Starchy foods, breads, cereals, butter, cream, potatoes and so forth are on the "Verboten" list. Salads, spinach, cabbage, brussels sprouts, fish and lean meats are the type of foods the doctor has recommended.

Dr. Robertson, who is a fat man, had this further to add:

"As a people, we are too obese," he declared. "We are stall fed. If we had lived like the Indians, had each day taken all manner of violent exercise, we would have no stout persons except, perhaps, those whom sickness or old age prevented from active life."

HERE'S HOW THEY DO IT

Here is a part of the diary of Florence Peters:

"Breakfast: One baked apple (no cream), one boiled egg, one slice gluten bread toast (without butter), one cup of coffee with saccharine and skim milk. Not so bad. That will last me till 10:30, when I take my half a cup of bouillon and one cracker. This is the life.

"I worked up quite an appetite for luncheon, which consisted of cold roast beef, rye bread for a change, lettuce and two teaspoonsful of cottage cheese.

"I have lost six pounds somehow. I weighed myself on the butcher's scales and everybody gathered around to watch me. Only 306 now, and still going down. Time for tea with lemon and one cracker. Not very nourishing, but it helps fill the vacuum.

"For dinner, boiled codfish with lemon, cauliflower, lettuce salad and an orange. No chance of gaining weight on that. I'm not so hungry now as I was the first day out. I suppose one could get used even to starvation. Half a cup of hot skim milk and to bed."

In his talk today Dr. Robertson said:

"Remember that you can get fat on anything—even cranberries and pickles, if you eat enough of them. It isn't what you eat so much as the quantity that counts. If your menu calls for bran buns, that doesn't mean fifty of them.

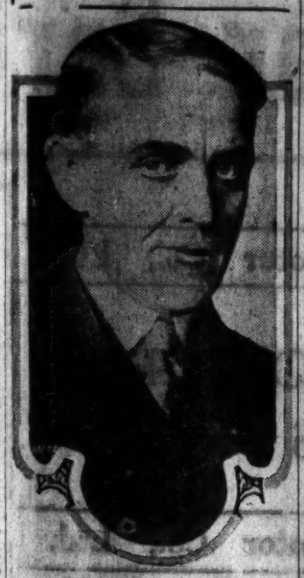
"If you're hungry, you can fill up on soup. Another way of fooling your stomach is chew a mouthful of whole wheat. Don't swallow it; just chew it as if it were gum. That satisfies the craving. If you fast properly for four days, you won't be hungry on the fifth."

"No, we'll be dead," interrupted one young woman.

One plump little woman said that instead of rolling on the floor she had been turning somersaults—she just rolled that way naturally. "Oh, it's awful to see steaks and cakes on the table and every one eating but you. That's a hades punishment," moaned the steak struck woman.

The fad has been taken up by other reducers. Now a class of male monsters is trying to reduce under the tutorship of a lady fat fighter. One thing in her favor is that she is thin.

Profiteering Facts Stir Washington



SENATOR A. CAPPER

The presentation before Congress of facts and figures tending to show the extent of profiteering in this country by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, has created a stir in official Washington. The Senator, in his charge, declared "the extent of extortion is almost unbelievable. A recent statistical report relates that 79,642 American corporations averaged a million dollars apiece in a gross profits of more than half single year."

In The U.S. Court For China

The Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd., Plaintiff, vs. Caravel & Co., Inc., Defendant.

Cause No. 888.
Civil No. 300.
DECISION
Filed June 10, 1920.
Clerk.

In the suit of the Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd., versus Caravel and Company a decision in favor of the defendant has been handed down by Judge C. S. Lobingier of the United States Court for China. The decision is as follows:

SYLLABUS

1. Agency: Ostensible authority. A subordinate employe in a local office in charge of another, neither of whom has actual authority to negotiate an exchange contract, derives no ostensible authority therefor from the mere fact of occupying such office with his superior.

Messrs. White, Cooper, Master and Harris, by Mr. Harris, for Plaintiff. Messrs. Fleming, Davies and Bryan, by Mr. Bryan for Defendant.

Lobingier, J.:

The amended petition in this cause alleges that

"On the 29th day of September, 1919, the defendants entered into a contract with the plaintiff (a copy whereof is hereunto annexed) for the purchase by the defendants from the plaintiff of the equivalent in gold dollars of Tls. 18,000 at exchange 133½ September delivery."

It is further alleged that "an order to fix the exchange was given to" an exchange broker by "defendant's manager on the instructions of Mr. Meyersohn, the defendant's director." This entire averment is denied in the amended answer and the sole question is whether defendant entered into such a contract as is here alleged.

There is considerable controversy as to the status and authority of the party who is designated in the above excerpt as "the defendant's director." His name appears on defendant's letter head (Ex. 1) though not with any title. He left here on Oct. 4, and defendant endeavored to have his deposition taken in Yokohama but before the interrogatories reached there Meyersohn had left for New York and plaintiff objected to a continuance for taking the deposition at that place. His successor with defendant here testifies that Meyersohn, like himself, was "in charge" of the local office but that the contract of employment of each contained the limitation "that he will not consumate any sale or deal without first receiving the confirmation of" the company and that such is the invariable practice in all transactions.

Other portions of plaintiff's evidence, however, render the question here not so much one as to the authority of Meyersohn as the capacity in which he acted during the negotiations which gave rise to this proceeding. For the details of the transaction plaintiff relies mainly on the testimony of the one designated in the petition as "defendant's manager" but who, according to its present representative, "was no more than a clerk when Meyersohn was here." This employe states that he had no power of attorney and that any contracts negotiated by him were "subject to Meyersohn's approval." As regards the beginning of this particular transaction he testifies:

"Q. What was the first thing Mr. Meyersohn said to you with regard to exchange?

A. To ascertain the quotations from the banks for demand draft on New York for $24,000.00 gold."

Q. Did you obtain any quotations?

A. I telephoned to the Hongkong Bank and they quoted 130¾.

Q. Did you report that to Mr. Meyersohn?

A. I reported that to him.

Q. What did he say to that?

A. He said that if you would get 131 he would close for 18,000 taels."

Thereupon, the employe states, he telephoned the broker that "our firm would like to close for 18,000 taels at the rate of 131 for demand draft New York."

On cross-examination he testified

"Q. When you showed Mr. Meyersohn this exchange contract, he asked you why the name of Caravel and Co., was mentioned, didn't he?

A. Not at once. After a little conversation I had with him he asked me why was the name of Caravel and Co. mentioned and I told him—I said 'Isn't it for the firm?' and he said 'No, Caravel and Co., have nothing to do with it,' and I said 'That is very easy, you can ask the Bank to change it and issue the demand draft in whatever name you want.'"

Q. He said it was his own contract and not the contract of Caravel and Co.

A. It appears, eventually."

It will be seen from the foregoing that there is no precise testimony of any specific instructions by Meyersohn to purchase a draft for the defendant as alleged in the amended petition. The employe to whom the instructions were given inferred that the purchase was for defendant but unfortunately for plaintiff he (its principal witness) does not claim any specific instructions to that effect.

In argument the case for plaintiff was made to rest not so much on the authority of Meyersohn nor upon the instructions which he gave but upon the fact that the order was placed with the broker by an employe of defendant who occupied the front office with Meyersohn. This, it is claimed, constituted such a "holding out" of authority as to bind the defendant even though the employe was not actually authorised to place the order. Plaintiff, however, cites no decisions, either English or American, on this point nor have we been able to find any which support his contention to that extent. To the same contention in a somewhat similar case it was observed:

"There is no claim that the power was expressly given, but the argument is that the power arose out of the nature of the agency, and that plaintiff had a right to assume that the power existed. It is to be remembered that persons dealing with an assumed agent are bound, at their peril, to ascertain, not only the fact of the agency, but the extent of the agent's authority. They are put upon their guard by the very fact that they are dealing with an agent, and must, at their peril, see to it that the act done by him is within his power. It is their right and duty to ascertain the extent of his power, and to determine whether his act comes within the power and is such as to bind his principal. . . . It is argued, however, that Harte would be presumed to have the power which he exercised for the reason that he was agent of a corporation, and corporations act through agents. Under the same circumstances and in like business, an individual would necessarily act through agents; and we do not understand that the presumptions are any different in the case of a corporation than an individual."

The foregoing appears to state the law correctly for any Anglo-American jurisdiction. A principal may be liable, indeed, for acts performed under the agent's ostensible authority but that is usually where similar acts have been permitted with the principal's knowledge. In the case at bar the employe who placed the order states that he never knew of any other exchange contracts on the part of defendant while the present manager says that it has never been the policy of defendant to deal in exchange at all. There was consequently no "holding out" on that ground and we have been unable, we repeat, to find judicial support for it in the mere fact that the employe who placed the order occupied the same room with the one who was in charge of the local office.

The evidence, therefore, leads inevitably to these conclusions (1) Meyersohn was without authority, except as confirmed, to negotiate an exchange contract on defendant's behalf; (2) there is no specific evidence that he attempted to exercise such authority; and (3) any instructions which he gave regarding the purchase in question were on behalf of, and bound only, himself.

It follows that plaintiff's averment that the "defendant entered into a contract with plaintiff" remains unproved and it is accordingly CONSIDERED and ADJUDGED that plaintiff take nothing by its complaint and that defendant recover its costs.

Demands By British Labor Start New Wage Advance

War's Dislocation Of Payment Standards Root Cause Of Industrial Unrest

BY HENRY CLAY

London, April 24.—Demands put forward in the last fortnight mark the beginning of a new cycle in wage advances. The miners' demand for 3 shillings more a day, quite independent as it is of their attempt to force nationalisation, is the most striking, but cotton weavers are asking a 60 percent advance, and all branches of the Transport Workers' Federation are pressing claims for large increases.

The demands in the main are being pressed in a conciliatory spirit and in all cases are still the subject of negotiation. All probably will be settled without a stoppage, but will the settlement be final? There is very little chance that it will. Advance has succeeded advance during the war and since the armistice, and no finality has been reached. Working people cannot settle down to work and employers cannot anticipate their labor charges. The industrial unrest of prewar years, which seemed at the time to be ominous of revolution, appears in retrospect as a period of peace and rest. Yet the main causes of the present unrest are not far to seek. I will try to summarise them and to describe the palliatives that have been adopted in default of dealing with them.

HIGH PRICES THE CAUSE

The immediate cause of all the trouble is the rise in prices; so long as that continues, there can be no peace in industry. The modern industrial system assumes a stable currency, but once the currency is deranged it gives results which common sense denounces as unfair. With prices rising as rapidly as they have done in the past five years every wage settlement is automatically dislocated six months after it has been concluded. Every advance in money wages is cancelled by the rise in the cost of living, an attack on his income so insidious that the workman feels that he has been cheated and is disposed to accept as true every suggestion of profiteering and exploitation. Moreover, profiteering—if by that is meant the taking of a profit that represents no social service—is inevitable. Stocks grow in value and the margin between expenses and receipts widens with the mere lapse of time. The abnormal rise in profits and the fall in the real value of wages are alike due to the general rise in prices. So long as the principal policy of the Government continues to send prices up, there is no possibility of industrial peace.

On this head the outlook is not discouraging. The Government has recognised the evil and is attacking it by reducing the floating debt and restricting the issue of paper currency. But war-time inflation of the currency is not the only cause of the rise in prices. The slower but steady rise in prices in the generation before the war was the chief cause of the industrial unrest of the years 1911 to 1914, and rising prices were not the only influence which the war exercised on industrial relations. If then we ever get over the dislocation caused by the war, the problem of stabilising the currency will still be urgent, and it is unlikely that industrial relations will ever return quite to the prewar basis because the dislocation caused by the war has been so great. This latter effect needs explanation.

WAGES ARE STABLE

Nominally in this country wages are very stable. They are settled by collective bargaining between employers' associations and trade unions, or by custom, with the result that a standard district rate exists for each worker from which only slight variations occur. When some system of payment by result (piecework) is in operation, the variations may be greater, but even there they are limited, either by basing the payment on standard time rates or by drawing up standard district price lists. The relations between the different grades of workers in an industry and between different industries are well understood.

The influence of these standard wage arrangements is well shown by comparing the amount of labor turnover in America with the same factor in England. Boyd Fisher's figures for Detroit, indicating an average stay in one job of about four months, would, before the war, have seemed almost incredible to an English employer. I know of no comparable statistics in England, but it is quite common for a man to spend his whole working life with one firm, and it is the exception in manufacturing industry for a worker to stay less than a year in a job. The reason, of course, is that the English worker has nothing to gain by moving, since wages are very much the same wherever he might go, and he knows it.

The war dislocated all these wage standards and also the relations between the customary rates of different classes and grades. That is the root cause of all our trouble. To begin with, the rapid rise in the cost of living led to demands for increased wages, which for the first two years of the war were conceded not to need but to bargaining strength. Those workers whose labor normally commanded a high value were able to increase their relative advantage. In the last two years, on the other hand, it was the less skilled workers who gained most, partly because the Government through the Committee on Production, took control of wages and gave advances at a flat rate for skilled and unskilled alike, partly because the general shortage of man power enabled low-paid workers, such as carters and dockers, to put their wages on a new level.

GOVERNMENT SLOW TO ACT

Had the Government taken control of the situation from the first the pre-war system of wages might have been preserved, temporary cost of living advances being granted to meet the exceptional needs of the war period. But the Government was slow to take control, and by 1911, when the Committee on Production began to systematise advances on this basis, the pre-war system had been irreparably upset. Thus a labor turnover on the American scale developed early. (We called it "labor poaching.") Individual advances and fancy bonuses were given, standard rates were broken and the workman started moving about in search of higher earnings. This movement was stopped by the Munitions of War Act, which prohibited an employer from taking on a worker in a munitions industry unless he had a leaving certificate from his previous employer letting him go or had been out of work six weeks. But, while it prevented the movement of labor, it did nothing to remove the causes that had led to that movement, and the disparities in earnings persisted and grew.

A special and most important cause of these disparities was the extension of payment by results. Unskilled and semi-skilled work was paid for by piece rate or output bonus, rates fixed were not allowed to be changed, because Mr. Lloyd George had given the trade unions a pledge against rate cutting, with the result that errors in rate fixing could not be rectified.

As the volume of uniform production increased the earnings of repetition workers naturally increased also. New standards of earnings for unskilled men and for women in industry were set up which bore no relation to prewar figures. At the same time the highly skilled toolmakers charge hands and others, whose work varied too much to be paid for on the piece rate or premium bonus system, continued to draw their old wages or so much an hour with the cost of living war bonus added, and found themselves in many cases worse off than the unskilled and semi-skilled repetition workers who depended upon them. The famous advance of 12½ percent to skilled time workers, made in the autumn of 1917, was an attempt to redress this grievance which failed completely because it was impossible to confine it to class for whom it was intended.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

Yet another influence working in the same direction was the interruption of normal collective bargaining and the substitution of state regulation of wages. Normally, trade-union leaders and employers are in constant touch. Each can gauge pretty accurately what the other can and will concede; neither will press an issue too far, because a strike or a lockout is a serious thing. During the war the strike was illegal over the greater part of industry, so that the real responsibility of the union leaders disappeared and their control of their organisations was weakened. Wages were fixed by Government order or arbitration award without any regard for commercial needs and possibilities.

Thus when peace came the normal relations between the wages of different classes and grades had been upset; every one compared himself with some one else and felt that he was getting less than his due; no one, employers or trade union officials, knew what wages industry would bear or what the other side would concede, and prices were still rising. The different parties in industry are still trying to find out where they stand.

NO EQUILIBRIUM IN SIGHT

In the circumstances the loss of 34,500,000 working days in trade disputes in the year 1919 was not excessive. It was three times the figure for 1913, but the possible occasions for dispute were many times as numerous. The price would have been a small price to pay if peace had been the result. Unfortunately, no stable equilibrium has been reached, and the only gain is the resumption of normal contact between employers and trade union officials. I still believe that a frontal attack on the problem by a series of trade conferences under Government auspices might have achieved something. The National Industrial Conference recommended conferences of this kind with the specific object of deciding what to do with the temporary war bonuses that were almost universal. However, the Ministry of Labor took no steps; the wage of a mechanic is still expressed in the formula of standard rate, plus war bonus, plus 12½ percent on earnings; and Government control of coal mines and railways has to continue if only for the reason that the Government has established level wages and charge that make it impossible to carry on the industries without a subsidy.

The Minister of Labor's policy has been directed solely to improving and extending the machinery of collective bargaining, without any attempt to discover or assert a principle in the enforcing and applying of which that machinery might be directed.

World's Paper Money Is Now 56 Billions

This Exclusive Of Russia—Ratio Of Gold Down To 12 Percent

New York, May 1.—In an address before the Sales Managers' Club of New York last evening, O. P. Austin, Statistician of the National City Bank, presented the latest figures of world currency, national debts, interest charges and other governmental expenditures, showing that the paper money of the world (exclusive of that issued by the Bolshevik) had increased from $7,000,000,000 at the beginning of the war to $40,000,000,000 at the date of the Armistice, and $56,000,000,000 at the present time; also that the national debts of the world had grown from $40,000,000,000 in 1913 to $265,000,000,000 in 1920, while world credits, another form of inflation, had also enormously increased.

The ration of gold to paper currency of the world, he said, which stood in 1913 at about 70 percent was at the close of the war 18 percent, and at the present time approximately 12 percent. Especially startling was the fact that while the increase in world paper had been $33,000,000,000 during the war period, the increase since the close of hostilities had been $16,000,000,000 or about one-half as much in the 18 months of after-war peace as in the 51 months of actual war.

The world budgets are now approximately five times as much as before the war and the annual interest charges on world national debts now over $9,000,000,000 per annum as against about $1,750,000,000 immediately preceding the war.

All Is Not Whiskey Sold In A Barrel

Washington, April 30.—A garage at one of the foreign legations here, six empty barrels, a small quantity of whiskey and two slick boot-leggers played the parts in a moonlight drama which cost two thirsty and credible citizens $6,000 and has just come to light.

The boot-leggers rented the garage, filled the barrels almost full with water; then placed false tops, poured in an inch of whiskey and replaced the regular barrel heads. The victims sampled the whiskey through a straw, paid $6,000 and discovered the water later.

DECLARATION

Since we have been established in business, we have dealt with firms in the purchase of shillings, for which all those firms having goods on order placed mortgages with us, not for speculation or gambling but for protection. Moreover, after all deals made with those firms, our seal is chopped as proof. Should any person or persons imitate our name in buying or selling shillings by signing privately without our formal seal we will not be responsible.

We hereby solicit the attention of the public to this matter by inserting notice in this paper, and in the Shun Pao and Sin Wan Pao.

Cotton Market

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son write as follows in their report dated June 12:

China Cotton.—The market has had a more active appearance during the past week and although there has been a fair revival by Domestic Mills, the operations of local professionals have been conspicuous by their absence.

The reports from many sections of the Cotton Belt regarding weather conditions are very encouraging and have commanded considerable attention. The prolonged dry weather up North has undoubtedly retarded the start of the crop; nevertheless, with good, seasonable weather from now on, there seems to be no reason to question, at the present stage of the outlook, the likelihood of a good sized crop even if the climatical conditions should at times appear unfavorable.

Aside from the new crop situation the diminishing movement of actual cotton has stimulated a certain amount of bullish sentiment, especially as the demand for desirable cotton has been fairly active. The other grades, however, have not shared in the demand and this continued neglect has caused a further depreciation in their relative value.

So far the outlook in general is good for an average start on a acreage as large as last year and with a good "Season" in the ground. With an average crop on the present acreage, there should be plenty of cotton in the coming season to prevent any extreme prices.

Yarn.—The market has been keeping steady to firm since our last report was issued. Several new orders have been booked by the domestic mills and spot is keeping steady. From the latest advices from India, the market there is very strong and as a matter of fact prices in India are 20 percent higher than those ruling here and, as a consequence, re-sales within the last few days, have taken place between here and India. With the drop in Exchange, future prospects are more than encouraging and considering the bareness of the stocks in the interior marts, a healthy revival is looked forward to as soon as the farmers have attended to their crops.

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. write as follows in their report dated June 12:

China Cotton.—There is no change of interest to report in our market during the past week, business continue to be carried in a small hand-to-mouth way and operation being limited to urgent requirements only.

Mills generally are keeping out of the market and show no anxiety to replenish their stocks, as owing to the depression in Yarn circles they do not seem much inclined to commit themselves. On the other hand the farmers, as is usual this time of the year, are stocking their holdings pending further news regarding the outlook of the New Crop.

The heavy decline in the price of silver will soon preclude buying on the Indian markets with the result that mills will be entirely dependent on the local crops for their requirements and with the large number of spindles coming into operation soon we foresee higher rates during the coming season and unless buyers are of opinion that a reaction will take place in silver we strongly advise them to buy gradually for distant deliveries whenever any choice lot is offered them. Tone of the market, firm.

VIENNA PAPER QUITS

Der Morgen Suspends On Account Of The High Cost Of Production

London, May 1.—A Vienna despatch to The Morning Post says that owing to the greatly increased cost of paper, labor and everything else concerned in the production of newspapers the daily Der Morgan has to announce its suspension. In its farewell article it says:

"All calculations of newspaper proprietors are now dependent upon the dictates of paper manufacturers, and the circumstances have reduced journalists to the level of the proletarians. The more honest a newspaper is and the less open it is to bribery, the more difficult becomes its publication; and so most respectable journals are in the greatest danger, and if things go on in this way only great capitalists, and more especially men with foreign money at their disposal, will be in a position to publish newspapers here."

Daily papers are now officially limited to eight and ten pages, and the evening editions of morning papers must not exceed two pages. The Hungarian press, too, is in a critical condition, as the stock of newsprint is now almost entirely exhausted. The Budapest papers henceforth will consist of not more than four pages and the price per copy will be increased.

A Vienna despatch of April 29 announced the suspension of the Neue Tag on account of the high cost of production.

FRANCE KEEPS LUXURY TAX

Paris, April 24.—The Chamber of Deputies, in voting clause of the new tax bill today, retained the 10 percent luxury tax which has been opposed both in the Chamber and by the general public.

This tax also applies to first-class hotels, and is expected to yield about a billion francs in revenue.

The British Budget

ALTHOUGH Great Britain was the wealthiest nation aside from the United States to enter the great war, and although she emerged from that war with her credit higher than that of any power except the United States, she is today taxing herself more severely than ever before and far more drastically than any of her Allies feel called upon to do. It is her set purpose to work herself free of the financial effects of the war as rapidly as possible. This will have the two-fold result of clearing the way for vast industrial development both at home and in the Dominions and of putting her credit at a higher point, in comparison with that of her Allies, than it was even before the war.

After explaining the Government's plans to the House of Commons on June 8, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Austin Chamberlain, make this remarkable statement: "We are in a position to buy our half of the Anglo-French loan in America, and meet all the other market obligations of the Treasury in the United States to the end of 1920, with a satisfactory margin. (Cheers). The debt of one hundred million dollars to the Argentine will be redeemed in a few days, the loan of twenty million yen in Japan will be paid off in a month, while a provision is being made at home for a reduction of debt by two hundred and thirty millions sterling this year and three hundred millions next year, without additional taxation."

For the achievement of such magnificent results heroic methods are required. Thus the proposed levy on war wealth is shelved in favor of an increased tax on excess profits and the reason for this is clearly explained by the Chancellor. The budget which he was explaining calls for a total revenue of £1,418,300,000 as against an expenditure of £1,184,102,000, leaving a margin of £234,000,000 for the reduction of the war debt, and in addition to this sum, it is expected that large sums will be realised from the sales of war materials still on hand.

Among the new taxes is one that calls for a shilling in the pound on the profits of limited liability companies, after the first £500. The super-tax also is to be increased. The limit of exemption is lowered from £2,500 to £2,000 with a corresponding rise in rates, and there will be an increase of six-pence in the pound on incomes above £30,000 a year. And in this connection it will be noted that Mr. Chamberlain says that some incomes are so heavily taxed now that there is left only five shillings in the pound for the recipient!

Nothing has been overlooked in the matter of indirect taxation. The wine duties are doubled. An additional duty of 50 percent is placed on sparkling wines; champagne is six shillings dearer. Draught beer has been taxed until it costs 10d the pint and a bottle of whisky now calls for 12s 6d. Two-pence will be charged in future for 3-ounce letters, with half a penny more for each additional ounce. Telephone rates are to be raised. "Much," says The Nation sententiously, "is a small part of the price of war to a victorious people."

If financial stability is the keystone in the arch of the British Empire, no one need fear the crumbling of that arch while the British tax themselves so inordinately for it. And when Mr. Chamberlain says that no other country has attempted a financial effort comparable with that of Great Britain or in which the well-to-do have been so heavily taxed, he is stating but the truth.

And if Germany will face the facts of her situation as frankly in defeat, as Great Britain has done in victory, and set about putting her house in order as bravely, she will not find her burden too heavy nor the road too long.

Wanted—An American Preacher For Shanghai

BY JULIAN ARNOLD
(American Commercial Attache)

A Prominent Chinese of Shanghai, a graduate of an American missionary school, asked an American resident there why it is that the American missionary urges the Chinese to attend church regularly, while very few of the non-missionary members of the American community are members of the China churches or attend Divine service. We have in China over four thousand Americans in our missionary population, spending upwards of $12,000,000 a year in missionary activities, and the Chinese with whom they are working are at a loss to understand why the American non-missionary shows such little interest in church work. Both the American and the British missionaries in China have gone there to devote their services to the needs of the Chinese population, which means that they have found it necessary to learn the language and to adapt themselves to the conditions obtaining among the Chinese people. This has resulted in taking them away from the non-Chinese communities for the concentration of their efforts upon the native population. In learning to know the Chinese and understanding his peculiar needs, the American missionary has got away from the environment of the non-missionary American community resident in China. In fact, there exists today what might be termed a gulf between the missionary and non-missionary communities among foreigners resident in China. It is essential to the welfare of both the non-missionary and missionary communities that this gulf be bridged, for the missionary in his work with the Chinese will find a sympathetic non-missionary community as most helpful, while the non-missionary in learning to understand the missionary better, and in coming to appreciate the value of his work, will become a more effective business man in relation to the Chinese. It is not intended to imply that some of our American non-missionary community are not already in close sympathy with the work of our missionaries, but these number too few in comparison with the entire American non-missionary population.

Probably no other means of helping this situation will be so effective as having the services in Shanghai of a noted American preacher, a man who stands out prominently in some center of population in America who has made a reputation as a big brained and broad gauged man. Such a man would command the respect of the English speaking communities in Shanghai including Chinese well versed in English, and he would be able to exert a big influence with these people as well as help to bridge this gulf which unfortunately exists between the missionary and non-missionary interests. Furthermore, on national holidays and other important occasions, he would be able to speak for American ideals and American institutions, and in his contact with influential Chinese and other peoples in Shanghai do a big work in making the West more favorably understood by the East. His sermons, and addresses would be translated into Chinese and go to a large part of the Chinese reading public. Socially he would be able to do much for the English-speaking community at Shanghai as well as among the Chinese.

It is presumed that such a man will be paid a handsome salary which will permit him to live in a way which will make it possible for him to take his part actively in the social life of Shanghai. The salaries which are given to our missicnaries in China do not permit them to take an active part in the social affairs of the foreign communities. Many prominent Americans and other foreigners come to Shanghai from time to time and a noted American preacher who has had splendid connections in America would undoubtedly be able to be of useful service in aiding these people to meet with the peoples resident in Shanghai. Probably the best method of handling this proposal would be to arrange for an American preacher in some big American city to spend what might be termed his sabbatical year at Shanghai. Coming fresh from the United States after close and intimate contact with prominent American business interests, he would be most cordially welcomed in Shanghai and could speak as one of authority on latest American developments. After his year in Shanghai he would be able to return to America conversant with much of China and many of the questions confronting the Chinese people. His services in the United States on behalf of more intelligent relations between America and China would be most valuable.

We should also have such a man at Peking. While Shanghai is the commercial metropolis of China, Peking is the political capital; thus an entirely different atmosphere prevails in Peking as contrasted with Shanghai. It would be a splendid idea if the man who was detailed to Shanghai could spend his second year at Peking, for in this way he could secure a far more accurate and more intimate knowledge of China and the problems of the Chinese people than possible by confining his activities to Shanghai alone. Similarly, the man detailed to Peking might very advantageously spend his second year at Shanghai, the two interchanging places after their first year of service and returning after two years in China to America with two other equally capable men to replace them on a similar arrangement. These men would render to both China and the United States a remarkable service in helping to bring about a more intelligent understanding of each by the other. From the missionary viewpoint they would be an asset worth many fold the amount of money expended in salaries and traveling expenses.

If these men were married and took with them their families, it would even help still more to further our relations with the Chinese people because the New China will be much influenced by what the women of the country have to do for it as by what the Chinese men are able to do. In fact, the New China places much hope upon the work of its women.

It would pay our missionary societies to give this matter their first consideration to the end that two of our biggest preachers be invited to accept this offer on a basis which would make it most attractive to them financially and with a full understanding of the marvellous opportunities which the positions have to offer, both for service to the Chinese and to the American peoples.

Faith In China's Stability

(Christian Science Monitor)

One of the characteristic efforts of the carefully organised propaganda against China which is being carried on by Japan is that which seeks to picture China as a country hovering on the brink of chaos. China is set before the world, wherever and whenever possible, as a country so corrupt in its government, so utterly antiquated in its social and industrial systems, and, generally, so uncivilised, as to possess no hope in the future save through the strong and firm management of some strong and firm power like Japan. Through the channel of the motion picture; through inspired articles in friendly newspapers; or through foreign newspapers, bought and owned by Japanese interests, the story of "What Japan has done for China" is being told and retold. Anyone, for instance, may see for a few cents, in the picture houses of the United States, the horrors of Formosa under Chinese rule and the blessings which have come to the island under Japanese rule. True, the pictures exhibited do not show the great morphia laboratories in Formosa, carried on under government supervision for the purpose of making morphia "for the China trade" neither do they show the daily setting forth of the motor-driven "fishing boats," carrying the drug across the Straits of Formosa to the nearest point in Fukien. But then, it would be quite as unreasonable to expect such pictures in a Formosa "film" as it would be to expect, in a similar film on Korea, the burning of a native village, or, in one on Shantung, the "examination" of native prisoners suspected of seditious practices.

In spite, however, of everything that can be said or shown along these lines in regard to China, those in any way acquainted with the Far East remain quite unshaken in their faith in China's stability. One of the firmest believers in this stability is Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, who was, until a few months ago, United States Minister in Peking. Dr. Reinsch, in a recent statement on the subject, is quite unequivocal in his asseverations. Present conditions in China, he says, warrant the utmost faith in the development and prosperity of that country. And why? Well, for many reasons; but chiefly, if the matter can be judged from the prominence which Dr. Reinsch gives to it, because China is at last "beginning at the beginning" in her great work of nation building. The Chinese, Dr. Reinsch says, have determined to devote themselves to a policy of educational and economic reconstruction for the period of at least a decade, meanwhile, striving to relegate all merely political questions to the background. The young men in the nationalist movement are committed to this policy. They realise that education is fundamental, and the improvement of education and industrial facilities is going forward. There is a specially strong movement for the establishment of more normal and technical schools and the adaptation of manual training to Chinese needs.

In other words, the awakening of China is beginning in real earnest, and nowhere is this more clearly seen than in Japan. With Japan it is a race against time. It is immeasurably more difficult for Japan to secure control of Chinese territory today than it was ten or twelve years ago. It will be quite impossible in another decade unless, so Japan estimates the matter, the fullest possible advantage is taken of the present situation to complete her strangle hold on the country. Every possible effort is accordingly being made. It is, however, a losing game. The world is beginning to be informed on the Japanese method, and is, accordingly, paying an increasing amount of attention to such men as Dr. Reinsch. What China chiefly needs at the present moment, for instance, is capital. Japan has done her uttermost to prevent capital flowing to China save in such a way as will serve the special interests of Japan. Dr. Reinsch, however, and others well informed on the situation have been urging, for some time past, that China is "a good investment." Now Dr. Reinsch returns to the charge. In his recent statement he maintains that China is in a much better position to attract foreign capital than most countries, because she has the smallest debt and the lowest taxation of any country. He insists that the general credit of the country is excellent, and that, when the growing stability of underlying conditions and the possibilities of a nation with such tremendous resources and so small a debt are taken into consideration, a loan to China "seems to be one of the safest investments in the world."

The chief stumbling-block in the way of the foreign capitalist has, of course, for a long time, been the cleavage between the north and the south, and this difficulty has been exploited to the full in quarters where opposition to China is strongest. Dr. Reinsch places the cleavage exactly where it belongs. He maintains that it is "a superficial matter" concerning the politicians and the militarists much more than the people; that, in any event, it is being steadily lessened; and that the tendency, today, is all toward a united China. On the whole, therefore, faith in China's stability would seem to be well founded.

Policy And Armament

(Japan Advertiser)

Baron Sakatani's protest against the large expenditure for armaments included in the Budget for the current year is the first word of prudence that has been uttered on the subject. Financial strain is already making itself felt. Prices are higher here, in a country of relatively low incomes, than anywhere else in the world except perhaps New York, and there is not the least sign anywhere of warlike danger. Why, then, asks Baron Sakatani, pour the money of the taxpayers into expenditure which is at least not urgent? The reasoning is irrefutable so far as economic considerations go, and on the political plane all that can be said is that the advocates of those great armament programs have kept to themselves their reasons for imposing such heavy burdens on the country.

A point is noted in this connection by the Naval Correspondent of the London Times. He shows, in the course of an article on the progress and expansion of the Japanese navy, that the Japanese are the only people in the world at the present time who have fixed an absolute, as distinct from a relative, standard for their fleet. "Unlike the British policy before the war of maintaining either a two-Power standard or a preponderance of 60 percent in capital ships over the next strongest naval Power, or the present American ambition to possess, in the words of Mr. Daniels, 'incomparably the biggest navy in the world,' the Japanese plans have no direct reference to what other nations may do. They provide for a fleet composed of eight battleships and eight battle-cruisers, all under eight years of age. No doubt, in their own secret archives, the Japanese Navy Department have tabulated the reasons which have led their Government to fix this novel standard, and the need for which to the mind of the Cabinet, must have been imperative." One can only repeat the truism that armaments depend on policy and wonder what policy it can be that seems to require, at this particular moment of pause after a disastrous war, an unparalleled naval program.

A Literary Club's Discussions

(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)

"What did you discuss at the Literary Club last night?" asked Smith.

"Oh, we discussed Shakespeare and Prohibition, Browning and Prohibition, and Emerson and Prohibition," replied Jones.

Too Shady

(From the Washington Star.)

"Don't you think our friend Crossum might loom up as a dark horse?"

"No," declared Senator Sorghum; "record's too shady. It would require a great deal of whitewashing to qualify him as a dark horse."

Cause For Quitting

(From the Kansas City Star.)

"Why did I quit him? Because he's crazy — rattle-brained — changeable, you know," said the stenographer, explaining a recent resignation. "Why, if I had stayed in that office a month longer I'd be taking my meals off a ouija board!"

The Younger Generation

(From the Boston Transcript.)

"The main difference 'twixt me an' my boy Jim," explained a Kansas farmer, "is that when I put in a day at work I don't feel like runnin' round nights, and when Jim puts in a night runnin' round he don't feel much like workin' days."

Well-Being Of World And The Irish Question

BY ALFRED G. GARDNER
(Editor of the London Daily News, and one of the foremost and most progressive publicists in England)

CONSIDER the bill posterity has paid for Castlereagh's villainies in Ireland; think of it in terms of money, in terms of human bitterness, generation following generation into exile and carrying with them the sleepless memory of wrong and the undying purpose of revenge.

And the bill still mounts up. Today it is more menacing than ever. The heritage that Castlereagh left threatens not only the well-being of the British commonwealth, but the well-being of the world, for the Anglo-American friendship on which the well-being of the world mainly depends cannot co-exist with the tragedy toward which Great Britain is drifting in Ireland.

Yet in 1783, in the brief moment of his power, Fox came within an ace of settling the Irish question, justly and forever. Conceive what that would have meant in the history of the past century. Conceive what it would mean today if Great Britain had an Ireland as contented as Scotland and Canada.

It is well to remember that politics is a matter of very strict accounting and that what one generation sows another reaps. Castlereagh sowed the wind in Ireland, and we are reaping the whirlwind. Politics is not a gamble, as the pragmatists like Winston Churchill, Secretary for War in Britain; Prime Minister Lloyd George and Lord Birkenhead think. It does really matter what you sow and the spirit in which you sow it. It does matter whether you live by principle or expediency.

ENGLAND'S BILL TO PAY

No one doubts this in his own affairs. And public affairs are only private affairs on a large scale. The bill is always sent in very exactly.

Great Britain is still paying for its unjust war on the French Revolution. And our descendants a century hence will still be paying for the criminal war Great Britain has waged on the Russian Revolution.

There is another and larger bill that is already coming in to Great Britain. The Peace Treaty is dead, but the evil that it has done will never die. There is no longer any pretense that the iniquitous document or the expectations on which it was based can be fulfilled.

The Kaiser's head is to remain where it is; the war criminals are to be left to the Germans; the deliveries of coal from Germany are not being made; the indemnities are vanishing into thin air; the French Chamber of Deputies has rung with the old denunciation of "perfidious Albion"; French writers are arguing that the German colonies should be given back to Germany, not because they love Germany, but because they say if the treaty is to break up as far as France is concerned it must break up to the disadvantage of Great Britain also—such is the love they bear the British.

TREATY SMASHED

The Supreme Council is destroying its own ghastly work. It is smashing the treaty into bits. Hear the most faithful of Lloyd George's supporters (J. L. Garvan) on the subject in the London Sunday Observer:

"The Supreme Council has reached at last with timid and irresolute steps the position which its most trustworthy advisers urged it to occupy twelve months ago. Had it unfurled its manifesto a year earlier the outlook might be different today in Europe, Russia, and the United States. At all events, the problems of peace are now being discussed in terms of prices and not of indemnities. That is a change from the sham to the real and all the more welcome."

What is the cause of the failure? It is now seen to be the most disastrous failure in living experience, perhaps in all experience. Only the future will be able to measure the extent of the calamity, but we are beginning to understand something of its magnitude.

The great hope that illuminated the days of the armistice has gone. The League of Nations has become a pale shadow; America has practically withdrawn from European affairs and resumed her policy of isolation; Russia and Germany have been reduced to despair and common hatred of Great Britain; Europe has been Balkanised; a new militarism, with Marshal Foch prancing about as its representative, has been set up from the Rhine to the Vistula; the Turk has been rehabilitated.

Economics In Politics

Professors Enlisted to Aid Republican National Committee As They Did Roosevelt

(New York Times)

Slogans and brass bands and torchlight processions and epithets are going out of style for political purposes. The public has manifested an aversion to them amounting almost to disgust, and the politicians, realising that "the full dinner pail," for instance, no longer serves as a campaign phrase, have set about seriously to instruct the public on what fills the pail—or lightens it. This has brought into action a unique political agency, at present embodied in the "Advisory Committee on Policies and Platform" of the Republican National Committee.

Dr. Samuel McCune Lindsay of Columbia University is staff director of the committee and Dr. Jacob H. Hollander of Johns Hopkins is associated with him. Each is on leave from his professorial duties for this work. Under their direction twelve questionnaires have been compiled, and 75,000 copies of them have been distributed, to sound the public—not the Republican public alone but Democrats and Single Taxers, presumably—on economic conditions. The committee avoids partisan issues. It deals with economic questions, but has not sent out a questionnaire on the tariff. It has ignored, too, such subjects as prohibition and the League of Nations. Here are the topics covered so far:

Industrial relations and the problems of capital and labor.
International trade and credit.
Limitations of Federal and State control and regulation.
The high cost of living.
Banking and currency.
The immigration situation.
Agricultural policies.
Merchant marine.
Regulation of commerce and industry.
Railroad problem.
Federal taxation.
Conservation of national resources.

The use of scholastic advisers in political campaigns is not entirely new. Theodore Roosevelt, in the 1912 campaign of the Progressive Party, got together several economic experts to help him formulate the platform used then, and to aid in the New York State campaign. That idea has now been elaborated, with Ogden L. Mills as Chairman of the committee, and efforts have been made to get as many authoritative answers to the questionnaires as was practicable.

Thus, the questionnaire on agricultural policies has gone to county agents of agricultural organisations, the questionnaire on currency and banking to 4,500 banks, the questionnaire on industrial relations to leading employers of labor and to more than 1,000 labor unions, the questionnaire on railroad problems to the executives of the leading railroads, the heads of the brotherhoods and to leading students of the railroad problem and a selected list of business men.

The character of the replies makes them valuable to the committee in determining, not only facts, but current opinion, while the representative character of those who have answered leads to the belief that they speak for thousands not reached directly. For example, the American Federation of Labor has submitted a comprehensive memorandum setting forth views of organised labor, in so far as the various questions are concerned, while the National Industrial Conference Board, representing leading employers, not only presented their views in person, but is likewise submitting a brief embodying the opinion of their group. Manufacturers' associations have circularised their list of members. Women's clubs have called meetings for the consideration of the problems.

Undoubtedly a great quantity of extremely valuable material is being collected. It will be at the service of the committee which frames the forthcoming Republican platform. The material is being made public as it is assembled, in so far as is practicable and to that extent is just as available for the Democrats as for the Republicans. But whether either party will make use of it remains to be seen.

Taffy went to Wall Street

I went to Washington,

Went again to Wall Street

I started to investigate
This Taffy and his ilk,
But Taffy stayed in Wall Street
And raised the price of milk.

I went to Wall Street

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

Novelists Who Don't Know

"There is no world so difficult to penetrate as the world of the peasant," says Miss Rebecca West in the New Statesman. "He is commonly too tired to want to talk to strangers, and he always watches literate persons with suspicion, in case they start talking the same sort of nonsense as the squire and the parson. These dispositions are hard to overcome, and, in fact, it is obvious that the Nature novelists have not overcome them. They show that when they ascribe to the peasant the dullness of speech and history which we always ascribe to those whom we do not know, when they are of everyday unvivid appearance.

"It is, of course, because of a misreading of everyday experience that they allege that the speech of peasants is dull. It is certainly the case that the hedgecutter who tells one the way or the cottager's wife who comes in charing is rarely epigrammatic, but then none of us waste our good things on strangers. The wittiest of us say no more than 'Season' to the ticket-collector. And it must be remembered that there are numerous persons of the employing classes who expect the lower orders to converse with them in stereotyped respectful formulas, and regard any idiosyncratic speech as an impertinence.

"Because of these things it may quite well be that flatness of speech is the verbal equivalent of touching the forelock, and that rustics no more go about boring each other than they go about touching forelocks to each other. And, indeed, the evidence of the very few novelists who have looked at the peasant with the naked eye and not through the telescope is all to that effect. In Thomas Hardy's novels there is more good talk than most of us have ever found in Bloomsbury or Chelsea.

"Mr. Galsworthy is like a woman who has lost her sight through weeping. He has so worn out his nerves by sympathy with pain that they no longer react exquisitely to experience as they used to do. In 'A Strange Thing,' as in nearly all the sketches, his fatigue has made him choose a subject that is melodramatic, which does not mean that it is not true but that its implications are so obvious that they are not worth discussing. He continues to command respect by virtue of his knowledge. A decline has fallen on his powers of expression. More and more is he disposed to write stories which are but bare proposition, the Q.E.D. of which is always pity. But all the same, what a lot he knows. Some of his later novels, 'Beyond' and 'The Saint's Progress,' show that he does not know things which one had thought everyone knew; but it is just as true that he knows things that no one else has ever known."

Microbes Alive In Amber

"It is not very long since mankind, proverbially knowing nothing of the greatest forces within its ranks, ignored the very existence of the microbe," says the Daily Telegraph. "Necessary alike to our life and our death, the microbe has been toiling and moiling for untold ages.

"The learned have advised us that bacteria are found entombed in the fossils which come from the coal measures and even older strata. When we try to think of time in matters of this sort, figures become a mere flourish, and we may leave the men of science to arrange among themselves their discrepancies of thousands or millions of years. But until the other day it was supposed that the bacteria entombed in the fossils were all satisfactorily dead.

"Now a French savant, Dr. Galippe, has announced that he has found microbes in amber, which, on the application of the proper methods to restore the apparently fossilised, became very much alive and kicking. Hitherto the oldest bacteria on earth could not claim to be much older than the Pyramids. From the tombs and temples of ancient Egypt microbes have already been collected and resuscitated, but the microbe which did his bit in the plagues of Moses or worked the yeast for Pharaoh's baker must be a mere baby of a few thousand years compared with Dr. Galippe's little friends out of amber.

"The estimated age of the particular piece of amber we are not told, but we may assume that its inmates were born in a world which had never seen man. They give us a text for a new sermon on the vanity of human thing. We are mere butterflies compared with the microbes of the amber, creatures of a day or of an hour. Our Victorian ancestors used to meditate on the immemorial antiquity of the mummy, but a mummy is a mere baby beside the little creatures in Dr. Galippe's laboratory, and they are still active.

"Our men of science argue about the thousands of years which must be assigned to the ape-man of Java or the Piltdown skull, but the microbes saw the ape-man come in and go out and we suppose are ready to assist at our own obsequies."

Women To Make The World Anew

Miss Rebecca West has a lively article in the Sunday Pictorial. She says:

"I have for years earned my living by expressing my opinions. People are willing to pay me money for doing so, and I take advantage of their weakness. The only exception to this kindly reception of my views is the British Government, who refuse to allow me to go into the polling-booth.

"They will remove the embargo immediately I am thirty. And yet I do not see what grounds they have for hoping that I will be more sensible at thirty than I am now.

"But indeed any test of the fitness of voters is an offence against the true conception of the franchise.

"It would tend to disfranchise the down-trodden classes which most need representation. Besides, it is based on a misunderstanding of what the State needs from the voter.

"What it wants from him is not so much a record of his intelligence as of his needs, and that can be supplied as well by the ignorant as by the learned.

"Indeed the part that women will play in the new world through the exercise of the franchise will be glorious, largely because many of them are ignorant, narrow-minded and dead to everything outside their homes.

"It is one of the worst things about men that they are not realist in politics. They tend to use politics as a medium for developing abstract conceptions and they go on doing it even though the world is going to rack and ruin because they will not attend to more practical matters.

"But the woman voter, particularly when she is stupid, and therefore, to the unthinking most dangerous, will be different.

"She will attend a meeting addressed by the Government candidate, at which he will speak about this and that, about Home Rule and the League of Nations and the Indian Empire and foreign policy. And she will go away and vote against him because milk and butter and eggs are dear. And she will be perfectly right. For all these things are vanities compared with the necessity for children to have plenty of milk and butter and eggs.

"In the materialism of women there is a force which, if it is rightly used, may make the world anew. If the women of all nations combined in the simple, unintellectual, grossly material demand that before men did anything else they should provide every child born of woman with an adequate supply of nourishing food there would be no more wars.

"Money that was being spent on cows could not be spent on guns. And the children would grow up into a race so strong and unirritable and so much in love with life that they would surely devise some other way of settling disputes than by blowing each other to pieces. In the meantime we ought to be thankful that this care for the physical basis, without which life cannot exist, is at last represented on the voter's roll. That it should preponderate does not really matter.

"After all, men will always be able to influence society far more than woman by the control of industry and the professions, which they will perpetually enjoy, since most women will always turn to the domestic life."

Signs Of Moral Collapse

"All about us lie the signs of moral collapse," says the Commonwealth. "There can be no doubt about it. We have sunk. And the most disastrous aspect of the whole matter is the patient attitude of public opinion towards vice in its various manifestations.

"Everywhere there is evident a temper that frankly accepts things as they are. Of indignation, of passionate and prophetic revolt, of holy wrath, there is nowhere any trace. We are back again upon the dismal fallacy that these moral shames are inherent in, and natural to, human being. Man is man as he is, as we see him, and the only sane method is to deal with him accordingly. Human nature remains the same through the changing years, therefore wisdom lies in sparing that nature the avoidable consequences of its grosser deeds.

"That is the popular mind. That is the tone of nearly all public discussions upon venereal disease, or unmarried mothers, or the vast spread amongst the young of knowledge about the means for the prevention of conception. Even living men are caught up in this most pessimistic and profoundly un-Christian outlook. It is the temper that would make the best of a situation that exists, rather than repudiate the entire and false necessitarian philosophy upon which the situation actually bases itself. It is a temper, too, full of attractiveness for us because it is apparently so intensely practical and worldly wise. Yet at root it is an acknowledgment that whilst men are men, and women are women, lust must needs arise, and when and where it arises should be so ordered and regulated and protected from itself that its more dangerous infections shall be at a minimum.

"And indeed there is much to be said on its behalf. The regulation, the confinement of vice, is something after all. Prevention is better than cure—but cure is not actually to be despised. But his modern temper about lust, when analysed, will be found to rest upon frank acquiescence; upon the tacit acceptance of the need of licence. And it has largely come about through our prejudice against dogmas."

A DRAMA OF RENUNCIATION AND SELF-SACRIFICE
in five splendid acts

A wealthy Parisian beauty, butterfly of fashion, to whose heart leisure and contentment are the dearest thing in life, who basks in an atmosphere of luxury and romance, whose every whim is gratified, every vanity indulged—and a young American aristocrat, aimlessly drifting and idling in the "dolce far niente" of languorous southern Europe. These two have met and loved—she rich, he almost penniless. Then comes the time when his better self prevails and he goes forth to play a man's part in the world of men. And when the supreme sacrifice is called for she does not flinch from the consequences, but willingly, cheerfully, dutifully accepts her burden—renouncing wealth, luxury, and all the material things of life in a supreme effort of self-abnegation for the sake of the man she loves; thus, too, finding her better self. And when the greatest sacrifice of all is demanded of these two, having found their better selves in the turmoil of an upheaved world, they together seek Charon's barque and cross the sombre Styx, hand in hand, heart to heart, lip to lip.
